What was an “ah-ha” moment during this series?
(something new you learned or a new idea you had)

What's been “at the top of your mind” these past few months from what we've discussed?

For note-taking and reference only.
Not for distribution.

DAP means educators create and foster a caring and equitable community of learners.

The role of the community is to provide a physical, emotional, and cognitive environment conducive to development and learning for each child. (page 111)

Educators make relationships the cornerstone.

- Implement positive, supportive, warm relationships with children and families.
- Focus on helping children see themselves reflected in the classroom environment.
- Model and support positive relationships among children and with families.

(pages 112-116)

Educators design environments to promote social-emotional competence.

- Each member of the community respects and is accountable to the others to behave in a way that is conducive to the learning and well-being of all.
- Every effort is made to help every member feel psychologically safe and able to focus on being and learning. The overall climate is welcoming and positive.

(pages 116-119)

Each member of the community is valued and recognized for the strengths they bring.

Not for distribution.

Observe the video. Write down your observations. What teacher practices do you see that relate to a caring, equitable community of learners?

Educator practices are fair and equitable and help all children feel seen, heard, and valued.

Case Study: Visit to a Mixed-Age Preschool Class (p. 17)

Three-year-old Ella is one of the youngest children in Mr. Franklin's class of 3- through 5-year-olds. She loves to build with blocks, but almost everyday, some of the older boys race to the block area and leave little space for anyone else. When Ella tries to enter, they tell her she can't because she's a baby and a girl. One day, she throws blocks in frustration, hurting several children. While Mr. Franklin has had many conversations with the group about all forms of bias, including gender bias, he knows he must do more...

Educators ensure young children's physiological needs for play, activity, sensory stimulation, fresh air, rest, and nourishment.

Play promotes joyful learning that fosters self-regulation, language, cognitive, and social competencies as well as content knowledge across disciplines. (p. 33)

Educators affirm and respect.

- Children's sense of belonging, agency, and ownership over their learning can be encouraged (or discouraged) based on how teachers approach interactions.
- Children must see themselves reflected in the environment (their ideas, identities, images, and cultures).

Educators scaffold joyful, playful learning.

- Play is how children explore, learn about, and make sense of the world.
- Play and playful learning support the development of self-regulation, executive functioning, collaboration, and thinking skills.

"Play is the highest form of research."

~ Albert Einstein

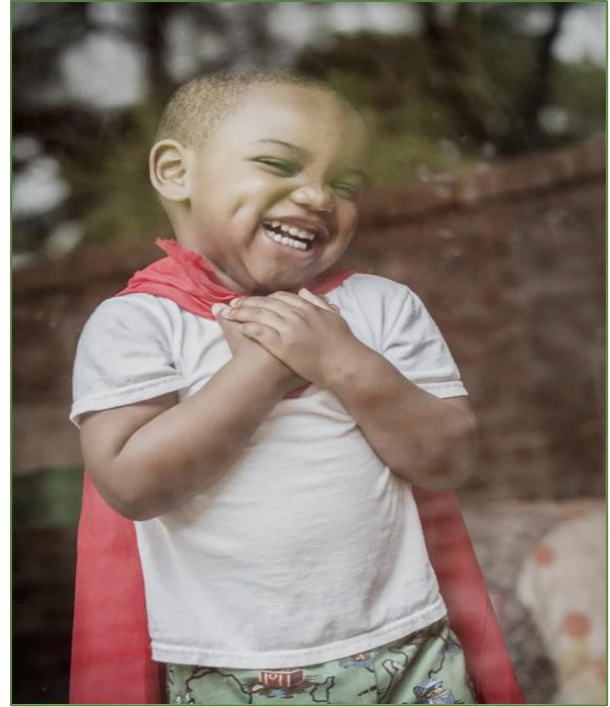

"Play can have moments of frustration, uncertainty, doubt, questioning and confusion."

~ Nature Created Play

"Play is an essential way children explore, learn about and make sense of the world."

~NAEYC, DAP 2022

Happiness and Joy... how will you create spaces for children and educators to THRIVE?

Questions/Reflections

In the chat box, please share...

What new thoughts were sparked as you reflected on our last six months together?

Consider how your image of children has changed (what they deserve, what you value about early childhood education).

Small Group Reflections

Determine a speaker for the group who will share your ideas back in the main Zoom room.

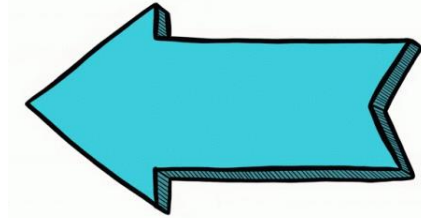

What new thoughts were sparked as you reflected on our last 6 months together?
